Among Scotch aficionados, in recent years, The GlenAllachie has carved out a more-than-solid reputation. In 2017, the Speyside distillery came under the ownership of living whisky legend Billy Walker, alongside partners Graham Stevenson and Trisha Savage. As The GlenAllachie Distillers Company Limited, the trio has led The GlenAllachie through miniature industry booms and busts. Along the way, they’ve filled the awards cabinet, twice winning “World’s Best Single Malt” at the World Whiskies Awards. In an era of mergers and acquisitions, we buck the trend taking GlenAllachie private and making it one of the few independently owned distilleries in Scotland. The water to the distillery comes from dam heads over 2 miles from the distillery. Henshead and Blackstank flow into Beachshach Burn, which supplies the water directly to the distillery, and sits on the Northeast of BenRinnes. With the capacity to produce four million liters of alcohol (LOA) per annum, we made the decision to reduce our output to one million LOA to place the emphasis solely on spirit quality. By slowing down production, we now have the luxury of time, allowing for a lengthy fermentation period of 160 hours, around triple the industry average. This move has enabled us to create a more complex, flavorful distillate. Unlike most Scottish Distilleries, our still house has two separate spirit safes which allows us to operate each set of stills independently. As the distillery was designed to be gravity fed, we also have horizontal condensers that makes it easier to maintain a consistent temperature or increase/decrease to alter the character of the spirit. We believe age statements are important. When we acquired the distillery in October 2017, we were extremely fortunate to obtain a vast amount of aged stock dating as far back as the 1970’s. Having been given the gift of time, Master Distiller Billy Walker immediately set to work putting his fingerprint on our single malt.

12-Year Scotch Whisky

'The World's Best Single Malt Scotch Whisky, according to the World Whiskies Awards' -Forbes

'The GlenAllachie 12-year was the World's Best Scotch Whisky. The whisky is a standout expression from GlenAllachie Distillery, located in the heart of Scotland's Speyside region. Under the guidance of industry veteran Billy Walker, the distillery has become a world-class Scotch whisky producer. The 12-year expression is part of the core range and has been meticulously crafted by Walker from hand-selected casks to showcase the GlenAllachie style. It is matured in a combination of Pedro Ximenez (PX), Oloroso Sherry, and virgin oak casks, contributing to its rich flavor and complexity. The whisky is fruity and aromatic on the nose, featuring honey, butterscotch, and dried fruit notes of raisins and figs. A subtle hint of wood spices, particularly cinnamon and nutmeg, adds complexity. The Sherry influence is unmistakable, manifesting itself in candied orange zest and subtle roasted almond notes. The whisky is rich, sweet, and full-bodied on the palate. It features a complex array of caramel, creamy vanilla, dark chocolate, and cooked fruits, alongside a spicier profile of black pepper and ginger. The influence of the sherry cask is evident but well-integrated, providing a silky mouthfeel without overpowering the other flavors.' -Forbes
