-Organic & Vegan-

The winery farms over 175 tiny plots of Albariño by hand, located in the Salnés subzone of Rías Baixas. This valley's proximity to the ocean, ideal climate due to the natural protection by mountain ranges, and decomposed granitic soil have gained the reputation for being the ideal zone in Rías Baixas for growing profound Albariño. The blend of these plots is what makes up Do Ferreiro Albariño. Gerardo Méndez was part of the original group of 14 growers who elevated the region's potential, as he and his father Francisco were integral in forming the original denomination of origin Rías Baixas in 1988. Gerardo has become known for his outsized contribution to the region as a leader in quality winemaking and for his incredible generosity and amazing hospitality. For those who have been fortunate enough to sit with Gerardo at his table and get to know him, they've found themselves in the presence of a man whose generosity, heart, and passion for sharing the secrets of his culture knows no bounds. Today, Manuel and Encarna contribute to the same spirit of uncompromising quality to the family business as they also push the exploration of Rías Baixas into new, uncharted territory. Manuel, who took over as lead-winemaker from his father with the 2015 vintage, is busy isolating plots and exploring how different soils, elevations, and exposures can affect these transparent wines. He is farming single vineyards, which demonstrate that the site is multidimensional here in the same way that it is in all great wine growing regions of the world. We are indeed still just at the very beginning of a long journey of discovery of the potential of Galicia and northwestern Spain. This is a journey that Manuel and Encarna are uniquely equipped to explore with their Gallego roots and family commitment to authenticity and excellence. Galicia is an unforgiving climate, especially for newcomers and outsiders. Here, greatness is carefully crafted and the landscape demands respect and hard work. The future is exciting, as Galicia works to claim its place as one of the world's great viticultural regions, we are thankful to have as our guide, the generous Gerardo Méndez, and his incredible family.

2023 Do Ferreiro Albariño, Rías Baixas

One of Spain's best Albariños!

‘Do Ferreiro is one of the best Albariño producers. Gerardo Méndez, working with his daughter, Encarna, and son, Manuel, has been instrumental in making the case that Albariño can be a great, long-lived wine and not merely simple and fruity.’ -Eric Asimov, NYT (November 2025)

Do Ferreiro Albariño is a blend of the best fruit from different zones and terroirs within the Salnés Valley and it is the wine that defines the winery. It is serious and balanced, complex and very complete with fully developed aromas and flavors, with a long, harmonious palate featuring vibrant acidity and a strong mineral, stony component. Do Ferreiro is a very dry, varietally correct wine that is really representative of the Salnés Valley terruño. Expressive and harmonious, combining power and freshness; Do Ferreiro Albariño is capable of developing in bottle for 10 years or more.
