One couldn't ask for a better location than the position enjoyed by Jonathan Buisson and his Domaine Les Roches Bleues at the foot of the majestic Mont Brouilly, in southern Beaujolais. The domain began in 1967 when Jonathan's grandparents, Annie and Louis Bassy, acquired a few hectares of vines with the strong desire to start their own wine domain. It was a daring idea at a time when very few growers owned their own vines and most small producers primarily sold to the large negociants, who reigned supreme. The family was quality-minded from the beginning, and the domain has seen lots of success in the decades since its founding. A fresh start came in 2017, when the young and charismatic third generation, Jonathan Buisson, took over his family estate, beginning the transformation of the domain around the production of organic and natural wines according to the principles of agroecology. The focus is on producing the purest expression of his terroirs as possible.

Jonathan farms all of his vineyards organically, and his vineyards were certified in 2021. He does not use any chemicals in the vineyard or winery. Beyond organics he is working with the system of agroecology and agroforestry (plant cover, hedges, planting trees within plots). The goal is to put the tree at the heart of the vineyard system to improve the quality of the soil, the environment, and fight climate change. He utilizes mostly wild grasses in the vineyard to help with water retention and guard against erosion. The average age of his vines is 50 – 65 years, with some vines being 100 years old. He is also planting young vines and switching to cordon training, which is better for organic and biodynamic farming by raising the vines up off the ground. This method allows for more aeration and does not trap humidity close to the ground, which in turn negates the need for chemical inputs.

The striking labels were created by Jonathan's good friend and artist, Astrid Amadiou. They tell a story of the personality and flavor progression of the different cuvées while celebrating women, as imagined by Astrid. She joined Jonathan for two harvests at Domaine Les Roches Bleues in 2010 and 2011, where she would make portraits of the grape pickers during her evenings there.

La Croquante 2021

12/.750L

100% Gamay. La Croquante is the entry point into Jonathan's range. This cuvée is crunchy and fruity, with a soft, glou glou style that is completely charming. La Croquante is an assemblage of vines planted on the pink granite soils of Brouilly. Fresh, racy and fun. Whole bunches are handpicked in small crates and selected in the vineyard. Eight days of whole-cluster, semi-carbonic maceration is followed by a very gentle and slow pressing using the château's old, wooden vertical press. The must is transferred into temperature-controlled stainless steel tanks, where fermentation continues with native yeasts. After racking, the wine spends eight months in 50-year-old foudres before being bottled unfined and unfiltered. A very small amount of sulfur is used at bottling.

La Baraquée 2021

12/.750L

100% Gamay. La Baraquée is a full-bodied, ageable red from old vines in Brouilly, planted on sandy pink granite. Dark and savory, the cuvée is reminiscent of the dark intensity of wines that come from both Morgon and Côte de Brouilly, while retaining the soft, approachable profile of Brouilly. Whole bunches are handpicked in small crates and selected in the vineyard. 14 days of whole-cluster, semi-carbonic maceration is followed by a very gentle and slow pressing using the château's old, wooden vertical press. The must is transferred into temperature-controlled cement tanks, where fermentation continues with native yeasts. After racking, the wine spends eight months in 50-year-old foudres before being bottled unfiltered and unfiltered. Only a very small amount of sulfur is used at bottling.

Les Trois Loups 2020
